1. First, collect the data and clean it to remove errors or missing values. Then, choose a model that fits the problem, such as logistic regression for classification. The model is trained to fit the data using methods like gradient descent.

2. Hyperparameter tuning is used to increase accuracy and generalization of the model.